Scheme Changes

Why are you changing the Long-Service Awards?

Our Co-op vision – co-operating for a fairer world – extends to more than just the communities and customers we serve. It is also a vision for our colleagues and their working experience at Co-op.

When it comes to recognising loyalty and long service at Co-op, we know from talking to colleagues that we currently start celebrating colleagues' careers too late and not frequently enough. Our colleagues also told us that it is not 'what' they get but 'how' they are celebrated that is most important to them.

In an effort to create a fairer colleague experience, we have evolved our long-service scheme to allow us to celebrate more of our colleagues, more often and in a more meaningful way. We have made the decision to start celebrating work anniversaries earlier, from 5 years onwards. This change means we are celebrating more colleagues' milestones sooner, meaning all our colleagues feel their career is being celebrated, which we believe is fairer. We also want to focus on making celebrations more personal and visible, which is why awards will go direct to line managers before the anniversary, so a celebration can be organised.
